RE: Testimonial for the Use of EEG/ERP for Proving Traumatic Brain Injury and Concussion

Dear Dr. Meeks,

I highly recommended that fellow attorneys and doctors use your services of EEG/ERP testing for the purpose of proving that their client or patient suffered a concussion resulting in traumatic brain injury and post-concussion syndrome.

I just got a $30,000.00 settlement on a case where only $11,000.00 was offered prior to having my client being EEG/ERG tested, and the circumstances were questionable as to whether or not my 80 year old client sustained traumatic brain injury because the onset of concussion symptoms started five weeks after his automobile crash. Upon receiving the results of this EEG/ERP testing interpreted by a medical doctor neurologist, the third party insurance adjuster became motivated to settle this case significantly higher than the first offer despite the just stated difficulties with the case.

The beauty of this testing is that it is hard, objective proof of concussion, traumatic brain injury, and post-concussion syndrome that cannot be manipulated by the client, and it is read by a medical doctor neurologist. This method of testing strikes me as the most cost-effective way of proving these types of injuries, and the result is that the case is worth a much greater amount of money with this testing as compared to not doing this testing when these injuries did occur.

Feel free to use this testimonial in any way you choose.

Sincerely,

David H. Hofheimer, D.C., Esq.
